On Gerontology

Our population continues to grow older, and the demand for geriatric care continues increasing. Geriatric nursing care plans are an essential component in ensuring the comfort and health of our elderly population. With a focus on personalized care, geriatric nursing care plans help nurses to provide the best possible care for their patients.

In this guide we offer some diagnoses for the care of the elderly. Learn about the assessment, care plan objectives, and nursing interventions for gerontology nursing.

What is Gerontology Nursing?

Gerontology (or geriatric) nursing specializes in the care of elderly adults. Geriatric nursing addresses the physiological, developmental, psychological, socio-economic, cultural, and spiritual needs of elderly people.

As people age, they require more specialized care and attention to manage the various health challenges. Aging is a normal and fundamental part of life. As a consequence, providing nursing care for elderly clients implies a collaborative effort. This effort includes the family, the community, and other medical staff. Like this, nurses can use the experience of each team to improve and maintain the quality of life of the elderly.

Geriatric nursing care planning focuses on the aging process, promotion, restoration, and optimization of health and functions; increased safety; prevention of illness and injury; facilitation of healing.

Here are a few examples of health risks elderly people may encounter.

Risk for Falls

Falls are a common problem in geriatric care. They can have serious consequences, including injury, decreased mobility, and decreased quality of life. In this article, we will explore the risk for falls in geriatric care. We also look at the important components of an effective assessment. Finally, we consider interventions for preventing falls in older adults.

Hypothermia

Hypothermia is a dangerous condition that can affect elderly patients, especially those with limited mobility, weak immune systems, and chronic illnesses. It is a serious health problem for geriatric patients, as it can take to numerous complications and even death.
